

Antwan Jones, Ph.D.

Antwan Jones, Ph.D. is a professor of sociology and of Africana studies at The George Washington University. Receiving degrees from Duke University and Bowling Green State University, Dr. Jones is recognized for his expertise on inequality, the impact of unequal neighborhoods on health, and the implications of gentrification on community race relations.

To contact or interview Dr. Jones, call Octavia M. Kelsey at 202.994.6345 or email antwan@gwu.edu.

Dr. Jones is asked to speak on the following topics:

- Gentrification & Neighborhood Change
- Race & the Criminal Justice System
- Health Law & Public Policy

Popular questions for Dr. Jones:

- Does gentrification create tension among residents? How does race play a role in this tension?
- Does the criminal justice system fail African Americans?
- How will Mayor Bill de Blasio's recent legislative policies help reduce health disparities among New York City residents?

Sample media coverage:

- RIOT (documentary) – National Geographic Channel
- <http://channel.nationalgeographic.com/videos/why-do-we-riot/>
- Michael Brown and Unrest in Ferguson, MO (in-studio expert) – Alhurra TV
<http://youtu.be/tXKARDaBqz4>
- Foreclosures Are Making Americans Sick – The American Banker
<http://goo.gl/8qw4Bl>
- Emerging Neighborhoods See Crime Spike – The Washington Examiner
<http://goo.gl/2myrlc>
- Amazon Prime and the Economics of Race – Huffington Post
<http://goo.gl/4IH2WK>

Scholarly research has been published in many notable outlets, such as:

- Journal of Health and Place
- Journal of Urban Affairs
- Journal of Immigrant and Minority Health

TWITTER: @ANTWANJONESPHD • YOUTUBE: @ANTWANJONESPHD
WEBSITE: WWW.ANTWANJONES.COM